Vancouver tapped as world's most "livable" city

Vancouver, B.C. (Sept 12/07) – The BC Real Estate Convention returns on February 25-26, 2008 to the Vancouver Convention and Exhibition Centre with its clear mission statement:

1. To promote the BC economy by increasing the exposure of investment opportunities
2. To provide an opportunity for buyers in the real estate market to find all resources they need under one roof
3. To provide information to the public to make informed decisions on future purchases

With the approaching 2010 Winter Olympics, new government initiatives to build and improve existing infrastructures such as new transportation systems, roadways and bridges, and consumer confidence in spending; there are many opportunities to capitalize on new real estate market ventures. The Convention, the fourth show, is a one-stop venue to get real estate-related information from the various exhibitors, which will include municipalities with their development plans, insurance companies, land developers, home inspectors, real estate brokerages, home staging companies, major developers, financial institutions, legal and accounting firms, professional real estate agents, associations and others.

Attendees will have the unique opportunity to network with all the exhibitors; attend the free seminars given by world renowned and influential people that represent different segments in the real estate industry; get a market evaluation; or even buy property, all free of charge. Regardless if you are a developer, a policy maker, an agent, a seller or a first or seasoned home buyer, you will benefit from one of the many different facets of the event. "This was my dream of creating the Convention", explains Lee Sang Hoon (Leo), Executive Officer.

This event is hosted by the Buyou Realty Network, a referral network group formed of professional realtors.
